1. Service description

The Virtual Café is intended to be an informal online meeting space where members can come together to share ideas, network, and collaborate in a relaxed and informal environment. The Virtual café provides a space for spontaneous interactions, fostering deeper connections and more dynamic exchanges among community members. The platform we chose to use as the Virtual Café for NEOLAiA is Discourse. Discourse is a powerful open source platform designed for online discussions and community engagement. We will use this platform to engage and empower communities in and around NEOLAiA. Initially, this space will be dedicated to researchers, university staff and academics, who will be grouped into “communities of interest” based on topics, functions or categories. The platform also allows management through community moderation, if needed. This can be leveraged to encourage users to take responsibility for the space by rewarding their involvement and contribution to maintaining the community.

2. Who the service is for

The service is for researchers, university staff and academics who are members of the nine universities of the European NEOLAiA alliance.

3. Who manages it

The service will be managed by the University of Salerno and in particular by the ISISLab.
